Report of the Examiners on the National Competition, June 1868.

The competition consisted this year of 942 works, of which 121 were studies from the antique, 321 designs for architecture or manufactures, and the remainder studies in light and shade, colour, or from the life.

A list of the awards is appended to this report.

The gold medal, for the study of the antique, has been awarded to a drawing of the group of the Laocoon, selected as the most successful endeavour to express correctly the contour of the figures, combined with that accuracy in the relation between the light and shade of different parts, which is necessary to a complete rendering of the subject.

Some of the larger works in this section suggest a caution to students and teachers, that the aim of a student of the antique should not be to obtain a vivid effect of light and shade by an oblique lighting of the cast, or otherwise, but rather to cultivate a perception and appreciation of the proportions, delicacy of form, subtlety of modelling, and breadth of treatment, which characterize the best antique figures.

It may be observed that the competitors for the gold medal offered in this section would be placed more nearly on an equality, if the competition for that medal were limited to single figures of a stated size. Studies on a larger scale might still be continued, but should be sent up in competition for awards only when consisting of parts of the figure, as the head, hands, &c. on imperial sheets.

The competition in the class of groups, as compositions of colour, is highly satisfactory.

In this section a prescribed size (say 20 in. by 16 in.) for gold medal works would probably have the effect of stimulating students to make more sustained efforts, rather than to be content with the careful imitation of one or two small objects, which does not fulfil the intention of this section of study.

Although we have been able to award the gold medal for modelling, we still feel that the results in this class are less satisfactory than is desirable. Several of the figures are pretentious in size without their scale being supported by a clear comprehension of action and expression, or by that completeness of detail and thoughtfulness of arrangement, which would justify the transmission to London of such large works. In the modelled designs from one school, moreover, we observed a great misapprehension of the use of material, in the endeavour to give representations of pictorial elements without that conventional treatment, which can alone render them admissible in sculpture. In some combinations of foliage and figures and animal life, the details were wanting in relative proportion, and deficient in that feeling for style, which should result from the study of classic or good mediæval examples.

We observe with regret that the analysis of flowers and leaves, with a view to develop, through a close study of their construction and geometrical forms, their infinite suggestiveness and their inexhaustible applicability to decorative design, has been lamentably neglected. The vital importance of this branch of study, through which alone the springs of invention can be fed, should be constantly held before the student.

The study of elementary design, by the arrangement of ornamental details in given geometrical forms, has not had its usual share of attention. This study, which prepares the student for the application of design, lies at the root of the labours of these schools.

We consider that a tendency to monotony in the selection of details, to be found in the designs for manufactures, especially those for wall papers, may be due to the neglect of constant reference to the infinite variety of nature. A more careful study of colour would also preserve students from an error which has destroyed the effect of several otherwise excellent designs for carpets, namely, the introduction of certain harsh and jarring tints too far removed from the general tone of the design, and especially a violent green, which seems to have been introduced rather as a technical symbol of some special dye, than as a representation of the intended hue in the finished work.

The designs submitted in these competitions should be prepared with a view to give, as far as possible, the effect of the objects intended to be produced, the absolute production of that effect being the only real test of its conception.

Masters cannot too strongly impress on the students that, as far as colour is concerned, subtlety and dignity are the chief qualities to be sought in these designs, which are, in fact, worthless without them, and that the use of the garish and conventional tints criticised in this and last year's competition must, in addition to its fatal effect on the immediate result, end in blunting, if not destroying, that delicate and spontaneous sense of harmony, from the development and cultivation of which alone those results may be hoped which it is one of the chief cares of these schools to promote.

In many of the designs for metal work there is a littleness and want of repose, which might be corrected by the use of forms or mouldings of an architectural character, with such adaptations as might be required by the particular object of the design.

In the class of architectural drawing compositions have been premiated, which, if not of great beauty, at least show earnest study of good models, and considerable power in the adequate expression of structural forms.

A gold medal awarded to a study, in monochrome, of a portion of the Trajan frieze, and other awards which have been made, will show the great importance we attach to sound and thorough work in the stages of study which precede the application of Art to decorative purposes.

Results of the Examinations of the Schools of Art, 1868.

1. The Science and Art Department aids the instruction given in Schools of Art to artisans and teachers, when the schools are under the direction of a local committee of not less than five well known responsible persons, and are instructed by teachers holding one or more Art certificates of the 3rd grade, provided day classes are held and that artisan evening classes meet under the instruction of the master at least three times in each week for two hours.

2. One member of the committee must be appointed to act as secretary, through whom the correspondence with the Department on the business of the school is carried on.

3. The following payments are made to the local committee on account of students who are artisans or teachers:—

a. Ten shillings for every exercise in freehand drawing from the flat, practical geometry, drawing from models, perspective, or mechanical drawing satisfactorily worked in a given time by an artisan who pays fees for being taught.

b. On account of every artisan who shall submit satisfactory works executed in the school during the previous year in drawing from flat examples, mechanical or architectural drawing, drawing from geometric models, objects of general utility, or casts of ornament, drawing flowers and foliage from nature, a sum in proportion to the works sent up, but not exceeding 15s. for any one artisan.

c. On account of every artisan who shall submit satisfactory works executed in the school during the previous year in drawing, painting, modelling, or designing for architecture, manufactures and decoration, belonging to classes not included in clauses 3 a and b, a sum in proportion to the works sent up, but not exceeding 20s. for any one artisan. Such works will be eligible for national competition.

d. On account of Free Studentships, a payment of 3*l.* for every artisan, being a draughtsman, designer, modeller, or handicraftsman, who shall be recommended jointly by the Local Committee and by the Department's examiners, and who shall submit satisfactory works under clause c.

e. Bonuses, consisting of—

One sum of	50 l.
Three sums of	40 l.
Five	30 l.
Ten	20 l.
Twenty	10 l. will be awarded to the head masters of Schools of Art in which the results of instruction, as tested by the examinations of the Department, shall be most satisfactory.

4. Prizes are given to students who excel in the examinations of the 2nd grade, and to students who send up works of great merit in the classes named in clause b.

5. The Department determines the number of the above-named payments (clause 3 a) to be made, and prizes to be given, annually by means of examinations of an elementary character called the 2nd grade. The payments and prizes under clause 3 b are determined by an inspection of the works of the various classes named.

6. The examinations of the 2nd grade take place in the month of March, in the evening, and are conducted by the local committee or managers of the School of Art.

7. The local committee also transmit to the offices of this Department for inspection, on or before the 9th of April, the works of students in the various classes on account of whose instruction payment is claimed, or who compete for prizes.

8. The best works sent up in clause c, ¶ 3, are selected to enter into a national competition between the works of all the Schools of Art in the kingdom, and medals and prizes are awarded to the students who execute the most meritorious of the competing works, by examiners appointed by the Department.

9. The prize list includes 10 gold medals, distributed as follows:—

One medal for the best study from the antique, in chalk or monochrome.

One medal for the best study of the figure modelled from the antique.

One medal for the best example of painting a group of still life from nature in oil colour, or water colour.

Six medals for the best designs in the three classes, architectural design, surface design, plastic design.

One medal for a work of a class not included under the above-named heads.

Twenty silver medals, of which part will be given to the second best works in the various subjects to which gold medals are assigned, and the rest to meritorious works in the same or the best works in other subjects of study.

Fifty bronze medals to meritorious works in any of the various subjects of study.

Any of these medals may be withheld if, in the opinion of the examiners, the works in any subject are not of sufficient merit to deserve them.

Students who obtain medals of the same class in more than one year's competition may receive books, &c. instead of medals.

No student can receive a medal of the same class twice for the same subject.

Additional prizes of works of art, books, &c. will also be awarded.

Under these regulations 51,232 works were sent up for examination.

The body of examiners appointed to examine these works observe that the increase in number is not accompanied by a proportional increase in excellence, and that many students submit a large number of elementary works executed in a loose and hasty manner, rather than with that careful and earnest completion which alone tends to safe progress.

They also observe that students do not appear to be induced to follow a progressive and well-considered course of study through successive stages and from well-chosen examples, but are too often allowed to follow their own individual bias with a consequent uncertainty of result.

These defects in the work of the schools necessarily tend to reduce the payments made to those schools in which they are observed, as so high a value cannot be placed upon works which do not give evidence of sound and watchful instruction as upon those that do. High awards cannot be made, for example, on account of drawings from flat examples, where it may appear that the student would have been better employed in working from the round, nor on account of works in advanced stages, such as drawing from the life or painting from nature, executed by students who have not previously acquired a sufficient power of drawing. Nor can any payments be allowed on account of landscape or figure drawing from coarse or vulgar chalk, or chromo-lithographic, examples.

The examiners of the national competition recommend that competitors for medals should be placed more nearly on an equality than they are at present; consequently gold and silver medals will be awarded only to works within imperial size.

The works entering into the national competition will be exhibited in London and in some one of the more important towns of the kingdom where suitable space can be provided.

The following table shows the results produced by the schools under the above regulations. It is followed by the report of the examiners, an alphabetical list of the students rewarded in the national competition, and a catalogue of the works admitted to compete.
